

The Goldman School of Public Policy cordially invites you to a panel discussion with

Christina Filarowski-Sheaks
Bryan Del Monte
Office of the Secretary of Defense

speaking on “US Military Interrogation and Detention Policy in the War on Terror”

Most US detention and interrogation practices were created during Cold War for use on conventional battlefields. The War on Terror did not fit these Cold War stereotypes. We will explain how US policies have been modified to fit a post-9/11 world. In particular, we will discuss what the US military has learned from its successes and failures over the past four years; the goals and principles on which current policy is based; the role of international law; and recent suggestions for improving and extending US doctrine in this critically important area.

Thursday, December 1 12:00 to 1:30 p.m.

at the Goldman School of Public Policy
Living Room
2607 Hearst Ave., Berkeley

For further information, call 510-642-4670 or visit our website at: <http://gspp.berkeley.edu>