You Are Cordially Invited to
A Panel Discussion on
Crisis Decision-Making
All Hazards Disaster Response Management: Threats, Problems and Opportunities
Sponsored by FEMA
In association with Mills College and Berkeley Goldman School of Public Policy
Monday March 4, 2013
6:00 PM to 8:00 PM
Mills College
5000 MacArthur Blvd.
Oakland, CA 94613
Moore Natural Sciences Building, Room 213
This panel discussion will bring together experts in emergency response, public health, and ethics to address the realities, risks, and ethical and philosophical issues surrounding disaster response decision-making.

These Crisis Decision Making Seminars are being conducted to address key issues of crisis decision making with an emphasis on the ethical challenges and questions that will be imposed at all levels of response planning and operations. Participants include emergency management personnel, responders, academics, and community leaders. Seminars address how decisions are currently made, how different philosophical approaches affect outcomes, what questions need to be answered to ensure all ethical implications have been considered, and how this decision making process can be communicated to both responders and to the public. The ultimate goal of these symposia will be to generate guidance for a decision making process that can apply in all disaster planning and operations and to develop a Crisis Decision Making Training Tool.

If you would like to attend, please RSVP to Dan Howlader at dhowlader@gryphonscientific.com

If you have any questions or need additional information, please feel free to contact Neil Johnson at Neil.Johnson2@fema.dhs.gov or Jessica Drum at Jessica@gryphonscientific.com

Space is limited, so if you would like to attend, please RSVP as soon as possible.
Looking forward to seeing you there!